Administrative History

The United Automobile Workers of America, affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations, began their organization drive in Muncie in 1935. Two years later the workers of the Warner Gear Division of Muncie were chartered as the Local 287 on March 25, 1937. Local 287 has been involved in two strikes against BorgWarner (previously Warner Gear), once in 1953 that lasted for thirteen weeks, and another in 1989 that lasted for fifty-two days.

In 2007, BorgWarner requested to open contract negotiations with Local 287 due to decline in demand for the plant's main product line—transfer cases for Ford Motor Company transmission systems. On December 18, 2007, workers rejected the request and the decision was made to close the plant. BorgWarner of Muncie closed in April 2009.

Scope and Contents

This collection includes records of the UAW-CIO, Local 287 and national UAW publications. The Local 287 records include the original charter (1936), agreements between UAW-CIO Local 287 and BorgWarner (1938-1986), constitution and by-laws (1942-1986), brochures related to pensions and benefits (1961-1980), a history of the Local (1978), minutes (1937-1985), and the Labor Beacon newspaper (1952-2000). The national records include proceedings from national conventions, reports from UAW presidents, and other publications for union members (1951-1995). The oversized materials include union charters and oversized newsletters. The collection also includes awards and plaques presented to UAW-CIO, Local 287 and its members, political correspondence with Democratic Party politicians as well as Democratic campaign pens, inaugural invitations, and Democratic convention materials. Newspaper clippings include articles regarding the UAW-CIO Local 287, national labor chapters, and Borg Warner history. Photographs include union conventions, parades, and other activities of the UAW-CIO, Local 287 and Borg Warner plant. Video tapes include segments relevant to UAW issues and concerns.
