Our program, “Know Your Worth”, does not need any paid employees. It does however require at least twenty volunteers and more would be welcomed and appreciated. We will be having Lauren Parsekian-Paul from Kind Campaign come to do a motivational talk to the girls in this program. Her campaign is a not-for-profit organization so they only request a donation. We would like to donate one hundred dollars to this wonderful organization. There will be no travel expenses. The girls will be working on sewing a dress or skirt, whichever they choose over the course of the six weeks. In order to do this, they will need sewing machines and fabric. Additional necessities are: buttons, zippers, elastic, velcro, sewing scissors, measuring tape, and thread in order for the girls to design their clothing however they please. Clothing racks and hangers will be used for the girls’ finished designs. The mirrors will be placed around our area so that the girls can see how they are looking in their outfits. The Ipod Dock will be used to play motivational music as the girls are working; an Ipod has been donated by one of the volunteers. The sticky notes, thumb tacks, and cork boards will be used for another project we have planned where the girls will write something that they like about themselves and something they like about another girl in the program and they will hang these on the cork boards. The pens and colored pencil will be used for the previous project.

While the first level of funding would make this program successful, the second level of funding will make “Know Your Worth” great. The second level of funding would provide us with the opportunity to put on a fashion show. The stamps, postage, and cards are for the girls to write invitations to their family and friends to come to the fashion show to see their finished designs. This extra funding would allow us to purchase bobby pins, hairspray, hair straighteners, curling irons, and makeup to help the girls feel extra special on their big day. It will also provide us with the rental fee for the auditorium at the Cornerstone Center for the Arts.
