This creative project is a half-day seminar providing information on how to become a collegiate student-athlete at the Division I, II, or III level. It is a professional development opportunity open to the public, but specifically catered to high school athletics directors, administrators, students, and their parents. There will be three one-hour sessions with various topics ranging from the student-athlete experience, to initial-eligibility, and finally the recruiting process. It will be a unique opportunity to learn from a wide-ranging panel of athletics administrators from each Division, and each with great perspective and experience about the world of collegiate athletics.
