

A385_2017AbstractReedyPatrick

Abstract

Films have steadily become a defining part of human history since their introduction to the world over a century ago. Filmmaking spread quickly across the world as many aspiring creatives wanted to branch into the new, innovate method of storytelling. As these creatives developed the process and scope of filmmaking, any story imaginable could be spread in a gripping and entertaining fashion. In the time I have spent studying film, I have learned to adapt and modify the concepts established by the filmmakers who came before me, developing my own techniques in creating my own visual stories. I've utilized these techniques in the development of an original short film, from the writing process to the final cut in editing.

Honors College
Ball State University
Muncie, IN 47306