

What's an important lesson you've learned outside of a classroom?

I learned how to bake the perfect cookie -- and it only took until my senior year!! The trick is to pay super-close attention to the baking time. Why is this important? The world needs cookies. All too often it seems we only ingest foods to fill our stomachs... That's all well and good, but what does it do for our souls? The perfect cookie reminds us of our youth; it reminds us of happier, untroubled times... The world needs more of these moments and I intend to put my skills to use! 😊

-David Carden