

What a Difference a Decade Has Made

What a Difference a Decade Has Made

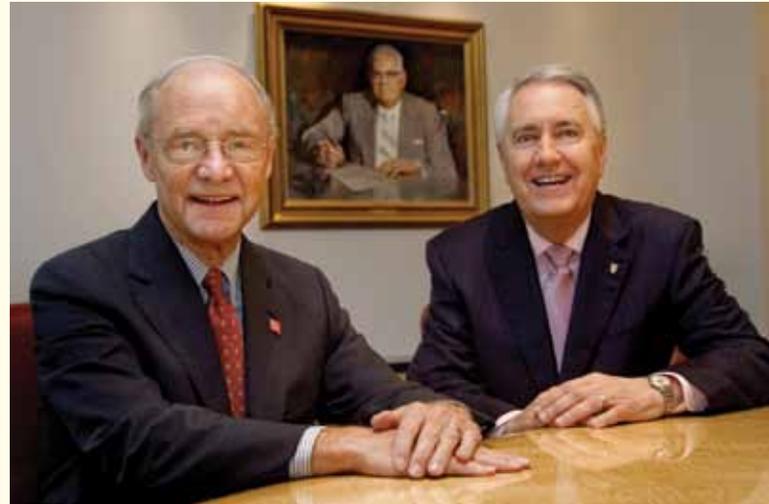

Dear alumni and friends:

In 2001, we commemorated 50 years of service to Ball State University. It was a time for celebration. Our founders provided a solid foundation, and we took pride in the growth of our board and professional staff, our strong partnership with Ball State, a sound investment strategy, and a growing asset base of $113 million. Foremost, we were grateful for the beneficence of our donors and for their loyal support of Ball State.

Fast-forward 10 years to 2011. Building on our experience of the last decade, an even more professional and innovative organization has emerged to serve donors and the university. We have weathered financial storms with a diversified investment policy, crafted with a balance of prudence and risk. Using the expertise of our board, staff, and in partnership with the university, the foundation has accomplished more than 90 percent of the goals of our 2007–2012 strategic plan with more than a year to go. Also in the past decade, the foundation has participated in two highly successful comprehensive capital campaigns while expanding services to our benefactors.

We have experienced solid growth since the celebration of our golden anniversary. What a difference a decade has made!

This year's annual report is a 10-year retrospective and is presented as a tribute to our donors and others who have taken us to today's level of excellence and stewardship.

Progress + Promise: A Look at the Last 10 Years

Our last 10 years were filled with achievements and challenges that required creative solutions.

What made this decade stand out was the significant growth and development of the foundation in the areas of board governance, investment strategy, university support, and donor stewardship.

A Fully Engaged Board

In line with our goal of ever improving the efficiency of the foundation, we have taken thoughtful steps to expand governance procedures and policies. Improvements to our organizational structure, committee development, the creation of task forces, and a comprehensive strategic plan have all been integral to this process.

Board and Committee Development

Our board of directors has grown both in size and scope of functionality, with 31 voting members and active committees that focus on board development and administration, investments, operations and finance, audit, and philanthropy. Our board consists of a wide variety of professionals responsible for the broad strategic direction and key policies as well as the overall governance and accountability of the organization. Service on committees in their areas of expertise allows members to become engaged and use their skills.

In 2004, we recognized that there would be significant turnover in the years ahead due to term limits on our board members, so an initiative to recruit top level executives and professionals was put into action. Consequently, our board has developed into a highly diversified set of leaders from all over the country with the skills needed to add value to the organization. Kent "Oz" Nelson, BS '59, LLD '94, then chairman of the Committee on Directors, is proud of the depth of talent that has been recruited. "The results are evident," he says.

Last year, Penny A. Ralston, BS '71, chair of the Committee on Directors, led a task force examining board members' commitments and responsibilities, a process facilitated by each member completing an extensive survey. The task force divided itself into two groups: the structure and content group, which focused on board composition, board meeting efficiency, and utilization of committees, and the board engagement task force, which looked at operational processes, accountability, engagement, and the mentoring and orientation of new members.

The newest committee, the Planned and Endowment Giving Committee, formed in 2004, has served as an asset for long-term fundraising efforts. Currently chaired by John R. Seffrin, BS '66, HSD '94, CEO of the American Cancer Society, the committee reviews program policies and procedures and assists with the cultivation, education, solicitation, and promotion of planned and endowed gifts.

Strategic Plan

In 2007, we unveiled our first long-term strategic plan, a set of goals that would guide future decisions and policy-making procedures. These six goals have helped us focus on achieving our vision and mission in a time of fast paced evolution, challenges, and opportunities.

Implementation of the strategic plan has substantially contributed to the strength of the foundation as a partner of the university and facilitated the provision of stable financial support to the university during recent times of upheaval and volatility in the financial markets. Next year, a task force will forge a new strategic plan for 2012–2017.

"The task ahead is to start with a clean slate and seek the most effective means for supporting this ever changing university in the years ahead," says Stefan S. Anderson, foundation board chairman. "It is part of our culture and mission to expect our foundation to continuously improve and seek new horizons to support Ball State and its donors."

Goals: 2007–2012 Strategic Plan

- Service to Constituents—Offer unparalleled service to all constituents, including the university, donors, and beneficiaries.
- Investment Management—Use effective investment strategies to maximize long-term performance for a growing asset base.
- Fundraising—Through the board, the foundation will become an active participant and catalyst for fundraising initiatives.
- Volunteer and Staff Development—Engage in ongoing development and succession strategies to ensure effectiveness.
- Organizational Structure—Continuously pursue an efficient organizational system.
- Integrated Operational Model—As an independent nonprofit, the foundation strives to operate in an integrated manner with other divisions of Ball State.

Nationally Recognized Investment Practices

In a decade of turbulent economic change, we have managed to persevere despite the market conditions.

Our assets have grown and the investing process has become more complicated, but our mission remains the same: to provide maximum, sustainable support to Ball State.

Small Nonprofit of the Year

In 2007, we were named Small Nonprofit of the Year by the editorial staff of Alternative Investment News and Foundation and Endowment Money Management at the seventh annual Nonprofit Awards for Excellence. Decades in the making, the award for the effective implementation of our investment policies and results is due to the innovation and creativity of our board, investment committee, and staff.

We were selected out of a pool of several thousand peer colleges and universities, all of whom have assets under $500 million. Contenders were judged on performance, investment decisions, and use of managers and consultants.

At the time, the work of the Investment Committee, then chaired by J. Richard Emens, consulting firm Hammond Associates, and members of foundation staff produced results that by September 30, 2007, had generated a five-year average investment return of 17 percent.

Asset Growth

From the period of 2001–2011 our assets have grown from $113 million to more than $199 million.

Over the past decade, the allocation of our assets has changed as the financial markets have changed. In 2001, assets were split between equity (70 percent) and fixed income (30 percent). In 2003, we hired Hammond Associates as a consultant and a year later started allocating up to 50 percent of our assets to alternative investments such as private equity, real assets, and hedge funds. Our current asset plan has evolved to the percentages in the chart below.

In fiscal year 2011, we achieved +20.6 percent in investment returns—the third highest return in foundation history, behind only fiscal years 1985 and 1997. This carries the five year average annual return to 2.3 percent, the 10-year return to 5.2 percent, and the 20-year return to 8.3 percent.

A Distinctive Model—CIO/Investment Manager Liaison

In 2010 and 2011, considerable thought and planning was devoted to the development of our current model investment management structure. Chief Investment Officer Thomas B. Heck, MS '83, has a distinctive role as the interactive staff professional working with the foundation and our third party investment firm, Perella Weinberg Partners.

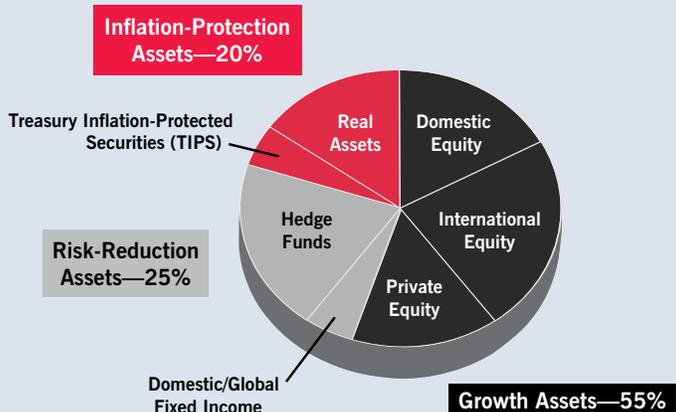

By using Perella Weinberg Partners, the foundation has access to resources it would not be able to build internally, while enabling us to tailor our investment policies, objectives, and asset allocation to fit our mission and needs.

Investment Return Policy

In the years since 2007, we have modified our Investment Policy Statement and the investment objectives as financial markets and university needs have changed. Today, given the reduced public funding for higher education, we are structuring our investment process and portfolio to target a gross long-term return of 9 percent in order to support the university's anticipated needs for higher levels of funding.

POLICY ASSET ALLOCATION, FISCAL YEAR 2011

Supporting a Growing University in an Ever-Changing Environment

Our partnership with Ball State has been strong from the start. Our mission to provide maximum sustainable support to the university has always been clear. Ongoing economic volatility and recent decreases in state funding will place an even greater premium on this strong relationship.

Campaign Success

Over the past decade, we have played a significant role in two highly successful comprehensive campaigns: Above and Beyond and Ball State Bold. Both surpassed their lofty goals (see Campaigns: Facts and Figures). Our responsibilities included providing support for campaign promotions, processing gifts and pledges, offering professional assistance in creating planned and endowment gifts, and providing strong investment strategies to sustain and increase incoming funds.

Financial Picture/Asset Allocations

Alumni and friends of Ball State made contributions of more than $13 million in fiscal year 2011. Contributions from 2001–2011 totaled more than $196 million. Total contributions since the founding of the foundation in 1951 now exceed $375 million. Future gifts such as bequests, life insurance policies, property, and life income plans have grown to more than $90 million.

During fiscal year 2011, we provided more than $15 million in support to Ball State in many areas including student financial assistance, academic programs, and faculty compensation. In the last 10 years, we have provided more than $180 million in support, with total support provided since 1951 topping $292 million. Practical budgeting and investment strategies have also allowed us to provide financial resources for high profile construction projects such as the Student Recreation and Wellness Center, Fisher Football Training Facility, Shafer Tower, and women's field hockey grounds at the Briner Sports Complex.

Investing in the Educational Process

Sponsored by the foundation, Ball State's Student Managed Investment Fund, part of Finance 367: Practicum in Investment Analysis and Decision Making, has allowed the next generation of investment managers to get a head start on their career. In 2005, we allocated $250,000 of our portfolio for the class to manage. The next year, $250,000 was added to the fund.

Students in this class utilize the Miller College of Business A. Umit Taftali Center for Capital Markets and Investing. Funded with a lead gift from board member and current Investment Committee chairman, A. Umit Taftali, the center provides an active business-trading environment for all business students.

About 125 students have participated in this real-world experience. In the challenging markets since the fund was established, the portfolio has earned an average annual return of +2.3 percent.

"Our intent is to create an experience that takes the knowledge and skills learned in the classroom to a much higher level. The program provides a tangible way for the foundation to invest in the education of Ball State students."

investment officer

- Capital improvements, including a new campus bell tower and carillon and athletic training facility—$28.5 million

Giving Back to Those Who Give

Going hand-in-hand with service to the university, we strive to make giving to Ball State a rewarding experience. With generous donor support, Ball State is thriving and leading the way in creating innovative academic experiences. We are grateful for those who, despite economic challenges, have continued to support Ball State, and we will continue to be good stewards of their funds.

Providing Choices

During the last decade, alumni and friends who created endowments (perpetual funding for scholarship, programs, faculty, or unrestricted purposes) were able to select two ways to manage their funds.

Option 1: Stable Value Funds ($25,000 minimum) do not participate in gains or losses in our investment portfolio over time. A percentage of the fund balance, determined by our board of directors, is available each year as a spendable amount for the purposes designated in the fund agreement. Donors may choose to reinvest a certain percentage of the annual fund balance back into the fund for long-term growth.

Option 2: Legacy Funds ($50,000 minimum) do participate in the earnings, gains, and losses of our investment portfolio on a total return basis. Each year, a percentage (spending rate) of the fund balance, determined by our board of directors, is available for support of the purposes designated in the fund agreement. Any unspent money is retained in the fund to allow for long-term growth.

Recognition

A new donor recognition wall was installed in the Alumni Center in 2004. This allows us to proudly recognize members of our giving groups: Founders, Quadrangle, Fellows, and Beneficence societies. A list of the more than 700 endowment funds is also displayed on the wall. With the success of the Bold campaign, plans are to expand the display and possibly include the large number of 1918 Society members who give to Ball State for a consecutive number of years.

Technology

In 2002, online giving came into the picture. From the convenience of their computer or other electronic devices, alumni and friends can go through a few simple steps to donate.

The Guide to Gift Planning website was also launched in 2002. It features the benefits of giving to Ball State along with explanations on what and how to give, gift comparisons, calculators, current articles on estate planning, e-brochures, and inspiring donor stories.

An online platform was launched in 2011 to help benefactors manage their donor advised funds. Created through Cardinal Funds Inc., a philanthropic partner controlled by the foundation, donor advised funds work much like a charitable checking account and are a great alternative to setting up a costly private foundation. The fund can be used to support various programs through the university, provide scholarships, and give to other charitable organizations. The convenient, password-protected online platform helps donors keep track of their account, make grant recommendations, and collaborate with friends and family.
