Abstract

This project follows the process for creating a miniature pitch for my cartoon series concept, “Welcome to Ghoulsville”. The work for this project included initial research for inspiration on the story, development of the world and characters within it, writing a script for a storyboard sequence, drawing the final storyboard, and timing the resulting panels out into an animatic. The goal for creating this project was to add relevant personal work to my storyboard portfolio and to improve upon my skills as an aspiring story artist for TV. The resulting work featured in this project are a title card, character designs, and the final animatic as a playable video.
