

Here's Your Postcard:
Reflections on a World Tour

An Honors Thesis (Honors 499)

By

Samuel Vonderau

Thesis Advisor
Professor Jason Johnson

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'Jason Johnson', with a long horizontal stroke extending to the right.

Ball State University
Muncie, Indiana

April 28, 2008

Date of Graduation: May 3, 2008

Sp Coll
Thesis
LD
2489
.24
2008
.V66

Abstract

In the spring of 2007 I had the opportunity to travel with the College of Architecture and Planning's World Tour3/Polyark17 to study culture and design in over 50 cities in 25 countries across the world. The experiences of those three months of travel continue to impact my thoughts and way of life on a daily basis. This creative project allowed me the opportunity to express some of what I have taken away from my travels and to put these ideas into a booklet form to share with others. The format is a combination of creative and analytical writing and graphic design that conveys some of the introspective understanding of world culture that I have developed. The goal of undertaking such a project is to present a thought-provoking an attention-grabbing account of my perceptions of the world.

Acknowledgements

- I want to thank Professor Jason Johnson for advising me in this project. He was extremely helpful in the graphic process, as well in aiding me in the organization of my thoughts.
- I want to thank Professors Rod Underwood and Les Smith for leading the World Tour 3 and making all of my experiences possible and fruitful.
- I would like to thank Dr. Barb Stedman for her continued support and guidance throughout my time spent at the Honors College.