

Abstract

Research Paper: Navigating the New Norm: The Rise of Remote Work in the Post-Pandemic Era

Student: Shulaya Genustella

Degree: Master of Arts

College: College of Communication, Information, and Media

Date: May 2024

Pages: 14

The COVID-19 pandemic has precipitated a seismic shift in the traditional landscape of work, with remote work emerging as a prominent feature of the new normal. This paper examines the multifaceted phenomenon of remote work in the post-pandemic era, exploring its impact on productivity, employee well-being, company culture, and collaboration. Drawing upon a comprehensive review of primary sources including research papers, industry reports, and expert insights, this creative project provides a detailed analysis of the challenges and opportunities associated with remote work and offers recommendations for organizations and policymakers to effectively navigate this new paradigm of work. The accompanying journalistic story provides context and a personal lens into the lived experience of remote work.